1. Great Instructor. He was organized and expressed the ideas effectively. He graded assignments within hours of turning them in.
2. Mr. Green is an amazing teacher, he makes complex concepts easier to understand, and is always out for the student's best interest. Mr. Green really knows his stuff, and I can tell he really enjoys philosophy. I hope one day he becomes an actual professor, as he is better than a lot of current professors I have studied under here at UT.
3. Was palpably excited about philosophy and genuine. Two qualities hard to ignore and allowed for engaging learning experience.
4. I was very surprised that a course taught by a graduate student was on par - if not above - the level of professionalism and passion of a professor. Not only did Green possess an extensive understanding of the course's content and related topics, but he also displayed a keen interest in the student's views in an informal yet professional manner. The promptness in which he gave feedback as to grading and criticism was astounding as they were given within hours of my submission. It would be a loss for the students of tertiary-level education for Green to discontinue teaching. As a non-philosophy major, I not only felt that this course was highly beneficial to academia but also applicable to issues outside the scope of typical classes.
5. Great teacher, he knows how to communicate information well and in terms that is easy to follow. He knows subjects of philosophy really well and is very passionate about it which I appreciate in a teacher. Overall I was really happy with this class.
